The second miracle took place in the old Chapel of Opera Pia Milliavacca and it is documented by numerous testimonies gathered by a notary public, underwritten by the priest and by eminent clerical and non-denominational authorities.

The morning of May 10, 1718 Father Francesco Scotto went to the Opera Milliavacca to celebrate the Holy Mass. It was about eight o’clock. The church of the institute was divided into two parts, the front where the extraneous could gather, and at the back behind the altar, reserved to the boarding students. In the front part of the altar, there was only the notary public Scipione Alessandro Ambrogio, chancellor of the Bishop and treasurer of the institute, and a nephew of the priest was a server at the Mass. And in the back part there were the boarding students. When the priest was at the point of elevating the consecrated Host, Dr. Ambrogio realized the Blessed Sacrament was divided into two Parts. As soon as the priest elevated the cup, the man, convinced that a broken consecrated Host was not valid, went toward the altar to advise the priest, and ran in the sacristy right away to get another consecrated Host. In the meantime the priest elevated the Host and really found the two Parts tainted by Blood. The bottom of the cup also had Blood, and little stains were on the same corporal. Ambrogio had arrived with a new consecrated Host and realized that the Host was Bloody. He started to cry right away. All the people present saw the miracle. The notary public ran to call Mr. Argenta, confessor of the institute, the theologian Vaglio and Ferrero from the penitentiary, who were also witnesses to the miracle.

At the same time even the other priests and three doctors arrived. The doctors Argenta, Volpini and Vercellone, attested to the fact the red stains were real Blood. Among the people there, one thought the Blood could come from the nose, or the mouth of the priest, but some surgeons present, after a meticulous observation, put the doubts to peace. Other clerical authorities intervened, and R. Bording, in agreement with everyone, wrote a report about the miracle.

Another important proof of the authenticity of the miracle was furnished by a document which stated Monsignor Filippo Artico, Bishop of Asti, in 1841 had the cup and the consecrated Host examined by others who confirmed the origin of the red stains. The Opera Pia Milliavacca has kept the testimonies of the miracle. The cup with the Blood stains and the consecrated Host, unfortunately, have not been preserved well.
